College News

Student allowances

This is a major issue for our student members, and has the potential to affect potential applicants' ability to access the clinical training programmes. For the majority of tertiary level professional courses, acceptance into the programme occurs at undergraduate level. Clinical psychology programmes are post-graduate, hence falling under the recent restrictions to post graduate student allowances. Despite MOH 10 & 15 year plans specifying the need for more psychologists to work in many areas including health, addictions, forensic, child development, and in particular relating to inequities in our Maori & Pasifika populations who are over represented in these areas, it seems that there is little communication between the Education and other ministries. The College and the Society continue to campaign actively against these cuts, and have been since this was announced last year. A survey has been developed to gauge how this will affect psychology students and all student members of both associations have been invited to respond to this by mid-May. The results will be presented to those responsible for introducing the restrictions and as well sent to the media so as to bring this issue to the attention of the public.

Hopefully most of you will be enjoying access to this wonderful, free resource, courtesy of the College and with much appreciated financial support from MPS, our professional insurance group. We again thank them for their generosity.

Prescribing Rights

At the 2012 conference, Des Gorman of HWNZ challenged us to step up as a profession and explore the issue of Prescribing Rights (RxP) for psychologists. We subsequently met with HWNZ and were invited to kick off a process with a discussion document. At the same time Steve Osborne of the Board provided the College Executive with contact details for Drs Steve Tulkin and Morgan Sammons who are involved in the APAs division 55 Psychopharmacology. Late last year the College Executive and a College RxP working party circulated a draft discussion document for feedback from key stakeholders (our members, the Board, the Society, and a representative from the University Heads of Departments and Psychology Programmes). The College working party had a followup meeting with HWNZ and the Board and are about to send out an updated document for comprehensive feedback. The Executive, in conjunction with the Auckland, Wellington, Christchurch, and Dunedin Branches also arranged for Drs Tulkin & Sammons to conduct a workshop roadshow in the four main regions to provide College members with forums to find out more and ask questions about the area of psychologists RxP. Earlier this year the RxP Working Party was invited to submit an article to the APA DIV 55 publication, the Tablet. This article, which summarised the work of the working party, was published in its Volume 14, Issue 1 edition. In addition, Deb Moore (President) and Elliot Bell (Honorary Secretary) have accepted an invitation to attend and present at the Division 55 Symposium at the APA annual convention in July in Honolulu. They will use the opportunity to meet and build relationships with APA representatives from Division 55, and also the APA's Clinical and International divisions. Finally College RxP working party have arranged for Elaine Levine, who was the first prescribing psychologist in New Mexico, to meet with the College Executive when she visits here in August.

The Executive and RxP Working Party are fully aware that there are differing views on this issue across the profession, and this has always been acknowledged in the documents it has produced. However, given (1) that this divergence of views is unlikely to change (consistent with all other non-medical professions that have explored RxP); (2) that the Executive has a responsibility to promote the interests of the large proportion of members who support RxP; (3) that the Executive's position that RxP would be optional only; and (4) that there are significant wider social, health and economic benefits RxP could bring; the working party's proposal is that a pilot trial of clinical psychologists prescribing does take place. The proposal emphasises the importance of maintaining the skills and science on which our profession is based, and for this reason recommended that RxP would be a post-graduate option for practitioners 5 years post qualification, who have consolidated their clinical psychological skills. However, the working party welcomes ongoing robust debate on the issue.

2013 Conference, Upping Our Game

Dunedin is wonderful in the autumn, and provided a great setting for the 2013 NZCCP 24th national conference, hosted by the Otago-Southland branch. The conference delivered a range of excellent speakers, who exposed the practical aspects of therapy. This also proved a great opportunity for a get together with fellow clinicians from across the country and to affirm collegial ties. We were honoured to have the charming and charismatic Alan Carr present the preconference workshop, Comprehensive Case Formulation for the Assessment and Treatment of Complex Cases. The conference programme included a fabulous evening relaxing and socialising with peers in Larnach's Castle - one of Dunedin's historic buildings. One of the highlights of the night was the piping in and address to the haggis. The photo attests to the fact that Alan Carr happily took part in the ceremony throwing himself into the role of the sword carrier.

Summary of the Psychology Profession Advisory Forum (PPAF) meeting, 19 February, 2013

Representatives of the New Zealand Psychologists Board, the New Zealand College of Clinical Psychologists, the New Zealand Psychological Society, the university HoDs and training Programme Leaders attended this half-day meeting in Wellington.

Key issues discussed

Update re the Psychology Workforce Group – The PWG met on 19/02/13 and developed a list of its priorities:

1. Student issues – allowances, internships, equity (Māori, Pacific, males).
2. Improve government and NGO knowledge of the breadth of psychological practice.
3. The changing roles of psychologists – Primary care, blurring of boundaries (e.g., talking therapies being offered by other professions), prescribing rights.

The possibility of direct NSCBI and Pasifikology involvement was also discussed.

Update re the NZCCP's prescription rights (RxP) proposal – The NZCCP's draft consultation document is currently being revised in line with the feedback received. The next round of consultations will be robust, and will be modelled on the process recently used by the pharmacy profession. It was noted that, if a representative group can be identified, consumers will be included in the consultation. The Board's (neutral, regulatory) position and involvement was again made clear, while the NZPsS's position is that more research is required before they can take a position.

Update re the 2012 Review of the HPCA Act – It was noted that a discussion paper is still expected from the Ministry in April.

Core competencies for Counselling Psychologists – A working party has prepared a revised draft of these competencies. The draft is now with the NZPsS Institute of Counselling Psychology for further comment.

The Board reported that:

- In regard to the Ministry's proposals for a single, shared secretariat – HWNZ have put up $250,000 to engage an independent chair and hire a firm (PricewaterhouseCoopers) to develop a "Detailed Business Case" (DBC) for this proposal. Once the DBC is published (likely in April), each RA will have to carry out the necessary consultation to come to a decision as to whether or not they will participate. The Psychologists Board remains committed (along with the other five "RA Partners") to their three core principles and to ensuring that there is meaningful consultation with practitioners before any significant decisions are made. The three core principles are:

Principle #1: Each RA will be permitted (if they so choose) to directly employ and control any and all specialist 'regulatory' staff (i.e., those staff carrying out specialist functions under Parts 2, 3, and/or 4 of the Act). A corollary of this is that each RA will determine for itself who its specialist regulatory staff will be and how many it will employ at any given time.

Principle #2: In regard to regulatory functions, each RA's current instruction and accountability chain is not lengthened.

Principle #3: Each RA's regulatory decisions are all made by either the Board/Council or its delegate(s) (in order to ensure the ongoing direct involvement of [psychologists] in these decisions).

- In regard to the development of Best Practice Guidelines – The guidelines on The use of Psychometric Tests will soon be approved for publication and a new draft guideline re Maintaining professionalism while using social media will be published for consultation. The Practice of Telepsychology guidelines were approved in November, and are available on the Board's website.
- The penultimate draft of the Core Competencies for the Counselling Psychologist Scope is with the Institute of Counselling Psychology for further comment, and will be presented at the Board's May meeting for approval to publish for consultation.
- The Board have been able to keep the disciplinary levy at zero for another year. The APC fee has also been reduced, largely due to the generosity of the Nurses Council who have offered to assist the NZPB to develop a new database by providing their own as a starting point.
- The secretariat is working on a list of all Board members who have served since the Board's establishment in 1981. A draft is on the Board's website and they would appreciate any and all assistance in making it complete and accurate.
- An HPDT hearing was recently held and the Tribunal's decision can be viewed on their website. The case is instructive in that it makes it clear that a practitioner's behaviour in relation to his or her colleagues can be the focus of disciplinary action.

Meeting with DHB Professional Leaders Group Representatives

The meeting welcomed representatives from the DHB Professional Leaders Group: Meryl McKay (Hutt Valley) and Malcolm Stewart (Counties Manukau). Malcolm noted that:

- DHBs are New Zealand's largest employer of psychologists.
- On-going training (funds and leave) is an issue for all but five DHBs. This lack of support may impact on some practitioners' CCP participation.

- Intern funding remains a key issue. The system needs to be made more consistent and reliable.
- Senior practitioners seem to be leaving the DHBs. This reduces the DHBs' supervisory capacity and subsequently impacts on their ability to offer internships. The main reason for the departures seems to be the (comparatively) poor salaries on offer. New grads are paying off large student loans, and some are going to Australia or the UK where pay rates are much better. The Department of Corrections also has a more attractive pay scale.

On the positive side, Meryl noted that:

- Interns love working in community mental health as it provides a very rich training experience.
- Some innovative approaches to Mental Health work are being trialled in the DHBs.
- There is a hunger for more psychosocial treatments in the DHBs, and an apparent appreciation for psychologists' contributions to this.
- In some areas there is increased access via GPs. The "stepped care" model is becoming more wide-spread.

Meeting with Dr John Crawshaw (Chief Advisor - Mental Health, Ministry of Health)

Ian welcomed Dr Crawshaw to the meeting, who then took us through some slides re his roles, the "Rising to the challenge" programme, and some new youth initiatives (including e-therapies). Dr Crawshaw noted that the Ministry is keen to have the profession's input on these programmes. He recognises that there are significant workforce challenges that will need to be solved if psychology is to play a key role, and wants to see a 5-year plan developed to build some confidence in the eyes of potential trainees.

Meeting with Directors of HWNZ Regional Training Hubs

The Directors of the four HWNZ Regional Training Hubs (all of whom have health backgrounds) joined the meeting: Michael Bland (Midland), Kate Rawlings (South Island), Prof Lorraine Stefani (Northern), and Dr Sue Walbran (Central). It was noted that the hubs are still new, and are at a developmental stage. The Directors want to know what the profession's aspirations are for the hubs, and asked that we keep in mind that the hubs are not funding bodies. They stressed that there are opportunities for working differently and talked about different types of psychologists and their possible contributions. They note that strong partnerships with other key stakeholders will be needed to realise these opportunities. They talked about how psychological skills are spreading to other professions, whose practitioners will need supervision/guidance from psychologists.

It was acknowledged that the new internships being established by HWNZ (two in each hub) will be discussed with the training programmes and DHBs in the area before any significant decisions are made. The Directors recognise that funding for psychology training has been poorly managed and distributed in the past. It was agreed that, as part of the solution, better workforce data is needed. HWNZ are hoping to build on Health Workforce Australia's success in workforce modelling.

It is possible that the hubs could become regional training funders in the future, and could even become the direct employer of trainees.

Future meetings

The next PPAF meeting will be held on 21 May.

ACC

SCAG Report- December, 2012

Catherine Gallagher

This meeting marked the end of 2012 and a clear move back towards advice and oversight in terms of SCAG's role within ACC. In the previous two years this group has fulfilled a more active role in dealing with the aftermath of the 'clinical pathways' and feeding back to ACC about the experience and frustrations of clients and providers during this challenging time. I don't want to tempt fate...but a lot of the 'heat' appears to have gone out of this issue, as ACC continues to be active in their attempts to incorporate Barbara Disley's recommendations in to their work processes. Of course, they ACC will always be an insurance company and sexual abuse will remain a complex human experience and so the analogy of square peg in round hole comes to mind...however we are at least moving in the right direction. Part of this movement is the formation of focus groups focused on various central topics (e.g. assessment, consumer experience, complex cases, overview of process, internal systems within ACC). These have begun to meet and will continue to do so into the new year.

Following are the key messages that came out of the meeting that have been summarised and provided by ACC. Of note, the work comes under the umbrella of Mental Injury Project as for one of its aims ACC is attempting to streamline how it manages contracts for providers and the clients they work for. A big part of this will be the potential offering of contracts to organisations to offer services to clients, in addition to individual contracts. The hope for this is that a more 'wrap around' approach can be taken and providers (once certified) can work with greater autonomy and flexibility to meet the needs of their clients. The aim is to have clinicians working in this field of all different disciplines, who are well supported, trained and have specific experience in the assessment and treatment of trauma. To aid with this ACC are open to ideas around how to mentor clinicians into this work, as well as working alongside training organisations to encourage specific input around this topic.

Notes from ACC:

Why is ACC undertaking the Mental Injury Project?

ACC wants to ensure that clients receive the best possible service, free from interruptions and gaps that cause confusion or lead to clients leaving the system. A key goal of the project is to give clients more choice and greater flexibility in how they access mental injury services.

What inputs will be used to inform the redesign and how will these be communicated?

The project will seek input from stakeholders and clients through a combination of approaches. Where research is involved, and wherever possible, ACC will share findings with the sector. Anyone wanting to be kept up-to-date can send their details to specialisedtreatment@acc.co.nz to be added to our stakeholder database.

How is ACC taking into consideration the perspective of the Sensitive Claims Advisory Group?

Members are represented in all of the focus groups and will be consulted with throughout the Mental Injury Project.

What changes can providers expect to Services?

The new Services will take an inclusive approach to assisting people with mental injury and will bring together the necessary agencies and individuals to provide more directed and holistic service to our Clients. ACC also plans to identify and remove gaps in service that currently lead to confused and/or lost clients.

How will ACC keep providers up-to-date on what's happening?

In addition to being involved in both the roadshows and focus groups, and updated regularly, assistance and training will be provided. This will be offered to guide providers through the procurement/tendering process and aimed at making sure everyone understands what's required and what they need to do.

Will pricing be addressed as part of the service redesign?

ACC appreciates the services providers offer and will be carrying out a pricing review to ensure that providers are appropriately remunerated under the new service.

What will happen with the 'support sessions' already introduced?

We are very pleased with early data that indicates that the support sessions have been a positive addition to the service. While a relatively small sample (110):

- 59% of clients required no further assistance from ACC because they believed that the support sessions were sufficient
- 36% withdrew due to external factors (e.g. they moved away or didn't believe counselling was appropriate at the time)
- 5% withdrew due to concerns/issues with the cover assessment.

How will we continue to incorporate the needs of clients?

While research continues providers should be encouraged to complete the support sessions reports for ACC. We plan to use this information to ascertain how clients are experiencing the service and using their feedback to continually improve services and client outcomes.

Will the project be taking into consideration the specific needs of different client groups?

Male survivors and older survivors have been identified as key client groups with specific, unmet needs. As such, the service design will be well informed with their specific needs and issues.

What opportunities will there be for providers who don't currently work with ACC?

One of the central goals of the project is to locate and access specialist skills and expertise that are not currently being accessed by ACC for its clients. This will include inviting agencies, organisations, teams (including virtual) and individuals to apply for contracts. We will work through professional bodies to let their members know how to get involved and will be publishing a request for tender on the government GETS website. If you are not already subscribed you can do so at www.gets.govt.nz.

What plans are there to ensure cultural responsiveness?

Cultural responsiveness will be taken into consideration throughout project planning and incorporated into all aspects of the new service design.

How does this fit with what other government agencies are doing?

To ensure alignment ACC has, and will be, liaising with other government agencies operating within the sector as part of our stakeholder engagement.

In summary, obviously there is still a long way to go, however there remains a real commitment from ACC to improve.

So...2013 will be another busy year, but hopefully one that will see very real gains for clients and providers alike! If anyone has input or ideas, please contact ACC directly, or you can contact me via Caroline at the NZCCP office.
